The LingsCars listing page currently displays everything at once which are prices, specifications, and tags resulting in a cluttered interface that can overwhelm users. It's difficult to know where to focus, and the overall experience feels static and outdated. By applying the Hover Reveal design pattern, we can streamline the layout and present a cleaner, more focused interface. Additional details would only appear when a user hovers over (or taps on mobile) a specific car, indicating genuine interest. This approach not only reduces visual noise but also introduces a layer of interactivity that makes the site feel more modern and user-friendly. The result is a more pleasant browsing experience where users can explore listings one at a time without being overloaded by information.
